Question 1

Answer the following question:

Since the onset of true democracy in South Africa, there has been an ever increasing degree of transformation taking place in all aspects of South African society. This process has proven more difficult than previously thought, but nevertheless, has led to significant steps towards transformation in many spheres including public policy and the economy. This has led to a unique set of challenges for business leaders to consider in the management of South African organisations. Why is the development of a uniquely African management theory important and how would you begin the advancement of such a theory?
