QUESTION 1:

- 1.1 Consider South Africa's disparate spatial pattern. Then, make a critical argument for the adoption of a sustainable urban form. Your argument must consider issues of (a) spatial and economic reconciliation and (b) spatial justice. (20)
- 1.2 Applying the analogy "Place-making is the only inescapable artform", use the four dimensions of perception to explain why places are largely experiential. (20)

QUESTION 2

In the developing world, it is expected that urban centre populations will grow exponentially in the near future. This population growth will be accompanied by informality (economic and settlement) as city governments struggle to cope with the influx of people. With this in mind and observing the picture below, answer the following questions.

- 2.1 Explain what type of obsolescence this space has undergone. (10)
- 2.2 Provide a critique of the above place using Lynch's good urban form qualities. (20)
- 2.3 Using Jacob's and Appleyard's goals of a good urban environment, state how you would transform this environment to a "good" environment. (30)
